Student David Velaz Bravo participated in the ELLS Scientific Student Conference

On November 22 and 23, 2024, David Velaz Bravo, a student of the Master in Law and Procurement, participated in the ELLS Scientific Student Conference, organized by the Euroleague for Life Sciences and hosted, in this edition, by the prestigious Wageningen University & Research, in the Netherlands.

David presented his Final Degree Project, entitled “Legal Analysis of the new figure of the Farm Veterinarian and its implication in the fight against Antimicrobial Resistance”, carried out within the Degree in Law and focused on the field of Administrative Law, being directed by Dr. Laura Salamero Teixidó. In this project, he analyzed from a legal perspective how the Spanish State has developed the figure of the farm veterinarian, based on the new European legislation, as a response to the growing problem of antimicrobial resistance, especially in the animal production sector.

At the conference, David had the opportunity to present his research in an international forum, alongside undergraduate, master's and doctoral students from various universities in Europe and other continents, members of the ELLS network. In addition, he was able to attend high-level presentations that addressed relevant topics in fields such as the environment, agri-food production, climate change, water resource management and health, among others.

The ELLS Scientific Student Conference stood out for its impeccable organization, both by the host university and by the members of the ELLS network, and offered him an enriching experience in the academic field.

David Velaz Bravo's participation in this event reflects the commitment of the students of the University of Lleida to quality research and to addressing global challenges from innovative and multidisciplinary perspectives.
